Diamond V Breakfast

"Breakfast with a Bovine Twist" on Friday featured Tom Edrington, PhD, a ruminant technical specialist and field researcher with Diamond V who focuses on pre-harvest food safety.

The Diamond V-sponsored breakfast, “The Future of Safe and Responsible Beef and Dairy Production”, attracted about 500 veterinarians and other AABP conference attendees.

Dr. Edrington noted that both dairy and beef operations can harbor large populations of human pathogenic bacteria, some of which may be resistant to multiple antibiotics. He then pointed out that today consumer opinion was driving dairy and beef marketing. Consumers and public health authorities are concerned about both food safety issues and antibiotic resistance involving "The Big Six" STEC (Shiga Toxin-Producing Escherichia coli) as well as the most dangerous Salmonella serotypes.

He noted that the recently implemented Veterinary Feed Directive and the public health threat of resistance to common antibiotics point to a future that requires truly effective, non-antibiotic pre-harvest interventions.

2017 Cattle Production Veterinarian Hall of Fame

Yesterday, two deserving veterinarians were inducted into the 2017 Cattle Production Veterinarian Hall of Fame.

This year’s inductees are Dr. Darrel Johnson, Marshfield, Wis. (Dairy) and the late Dr. Rodney Oliphant, Offerle, Kan. (Beef).

The award, sponsored by Merck Animal Health, AABP, the Academy of Veterinary Consultants, Bovine Veterinarian Magazine and Osborn Barr, was established in 2011. It honors the traditions of production veterinary medicine and the individuals who have made a lasting impact on the profession.

Ohio State Retains the Quiz Bowl Crown!

The Ohio State University AABP Quiz Bowl team takes the crown again! In a spirited competition, OSU defended their 2016 title against Oklahoma State University.

In all, 28 teams representing 24 veterinary schools participated Friday morning in numerous matches and rounds of competition.

At the break, a special Quiz Bowl event was held where the OSU team went head-to-head with the AABP Executive Committee! There may have been some “loaded” questions for both teams, but they were good sports, had the audience in stitches (well, figuratively) and the OSU team remained victorious!

Visit the AABP Facebook page and check out the video of the entire match!
